---	------------------------------

Louis Barnett is a 27-year-old British licensed chocolatier who runs an international chocolate empire with exclusive department stores in London, New York and even Moscow. But things 1) (not be) _____ always that easy. Louis 2) (drop out) _____ of school when he was only eleven because of his learning problems. Louis was diagnosed as dyslexic, dyspraxic and dyscalculic. So, Louis began a home-study programme with a tutor on the thing he loved most: chocolate.

Louis said he 3) (always be) _____ intrigued by chocolate since he was a child. By the time he was thirteen, working in his parents’ garage, he 4) (already create) _____ his own line of chocolates, a sample of which he sent to Waitrose and Sainsbury’s head office. He became their youngest supplier at the age of 14. He then gained a qualification in chocolate making from the prestigious Swiss Callebaut Academy, which sponsored the rest of his chocolate-making education. At the age of sixteen, he 5) (sell) _____ chocolate to luxury department stores in both the UK and the USA. His company 6) (call) _____ Chokolit Ltd. because this is how Louis 7) (spell) _____ ‘chocolate’.

‘What I 8) (do) _____ so far is monumental but I 9) (think) _____ about how I can use the attention I am getting. I 10) (like) _____ to help young children with the same learning problems I have,’ he says.

DO THEY KNOW IT’S CHRISTMAS?

The day after seeing a TV report about a famine in Ethiopia, pop singer Bob Geldof decided he wanted to do something to help Ethiopia. It was this TV report that gave Geldof the idea of recording a song for the African famine. He asked another musician, Midge Ure, to help him write the music and lyrics and they then recruited forty-five of the most popular Irish and British singers of the early 1980s. Each artist in the group, known as Band Aid, sang a line of the song ‘Do they know it’s Christmas?’. The result was one of the biggest-selling singles of all time. The success of the song probably had more to do with the performers rather than the quality of the music but it was a great success. The BBC played it once an hour. Geldof and Ure had hoped to make £70,000 but they ended up making £70,000,000.

However, not everyone was convinced that it had been such a good idea. There were criticisms and doubts about whether the money would reach Ethiopia. But when eight huge planes with the Band Aid logo arrived in Ethiopia even the critics were impressed.

Difficulties with transporting the aid once in Africa led to the next phase of the effort. Geldof began to protest against the local Ethiopian trucking companies which refused to transport and distribute the food. He then organised the Live Aid concert held simultaneously at Wembley Stadium in London (attended by 72,000 people) and John F. Kennedy Stadium in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, United States (attended by about 100,000 people) on July 13th 1985. It was one of the largest-scale television broadcasts of all time with an estimated global audience of 1.9 billion, across 150 nations. This is nearly 40% of the world population at the time.
