Many of the major UK supermarket chains have come under fire with accusations of various unethical acts over the past decade. They have wasted tonnes of food, they have underpaid their suppliers and they have contributed to excessive plastic waste in their packaging, which has had its impact on our environment. 1-_____. In response to growing consumer backlash against the huge amounts of plastic waste generated by plastic packaging, some of the largest UK supermarkets have signed up to a pact promising to transform packaging and cut plastic wastage. In a pledge to reuse, recycle or compost all plastic wastage by 2025, supermarkets are now beginning to take some responsibility for the part they play in contributing to the damage to our environment, with one major supermarket announcing their plan to eliminate all plastic packaging in their own-brand products by 2023. 2-_____. However, most supermarkets operate under a veil of secrecy when asked for exact figures of food wastage, and without more transparency it is hard to come up with a systematic approach to avoiding waste and to redistributing surplus food. There is no doubt that we still have a long way to go in reducing food waste and plastic waste. 3-_____. Perhaps the major supermarkets might take inspiration from these smaller grocers and gradually move towards a more sustainable future for us all.
